Looking for $200,000 Worth of Unset Com

-They Found Nothing, and Apologised-Then Reard They End Seen Ontwitted The Custom House authorities were notified by letter from London a few weeks ago that a New York jeweller was investing largely in diamonds and other precious stones. It was thought, the letter said, that he intended to smuggle them into New York. A second and later letter told that the jeweller and his wife had engaged staterooms on a White Star liner, and that they carried with them $200,000 worth of unset goms.

Many of the most Important seizures made by the customs officials have resulted from just such tips, and the inspectors assigned to the White Star liner were warned to be particplarly attentive to Mr. and Mrs. Jeweller. Half a hundred persons and their baggage were examined before it came to the turn of the suspected couple. They declared some few articles pected couple. They declared some few articles of trifling value and were about to leave the pier when they were invited to submit to be searched. After a few ineffectual remonstrances Mr. and Mrs. Jeweller returned to the ship and went with the officers to different staterooms. A woman searched Mrs. Jeweller, while a man performed the same offices for her husband. Kothing was found to confirm the letter of advice or justify the further detention of the passengers. The officials apologized profusely and humbly, and talked about the unpleasant duties demanded of them by their chiefs. Mr. Jeweller said unpleasant things about the port of New York, while Mrs. Jeweller asked that a carriage be sent for, as she felt too ili to walk. The inspectors reported to headquarters, and the authorities referred again to their letters of advice. The letters were from a trusted correspondent, who had never before misled them, and there could be no doubt as to the identity of the people spoken of. The inspectors were equally confident that if any smuggling had been done they were not to blame, as the search had falled to discover anything dutiable, the authorities had to be satisfied and the matter was let drop.

Yesterday morning an anonymous letter, which the recipiont refuses to make public, told the disgusted employees of Collector Hendricks that they had been fooled, that their investigation had not been sufficiently searching, and that Mrs. Jeweller had succeeded in carrying the jewels ashore. The Custom House people for some reason place implicit faith in the information, but they are powerless now.

"If we went to the store," said one of them to the reporter, "and told Mr. Jeweller we knew all about the trick and how it was done, he would throw open his safe door and tell us to take anything we could prove to be smuggled. The evidence of our own inspectors proves that nothing was smuggled, and there we are. No one will trick us again that way you may be sure." of trifling value and were about to leave the

PURSUING JOHN HOEY.

Suit for Nearly Three-quarters of a Million

On the application of President Henry Sanford of the Adams Express Company Judge Patterson of the Supreme Court yesterday granted an attachment against the property in this State of John Hoey, the deposed Pres ident of the company, in a suit to recove $712,050.57. Seward, Guthrie & Morawetz, on the affidavit of Frederick Lovejoy, Vice-President of the company, secured the attach ment, which was granted on the ground that Mr. Hoey is a non-resident. His home is at

In his affidavit Mr. Lovejoy says that on Jan. 7, 1870, Mr. Hoey was appointed a manager of the company, and has continued to act in that capacity ever since. He subsequently became trustee, Vice-President, and President. Prio to March 25, 1882, Mr. Lovejoy alleges, Mr. Hoey, either individually or with other per sons, secured for $73,095 an interest in the New York and Boston Despatch Company, the Kingsley Express Company, and the Union Express Company, which on the date named he sold and transferred to the Adams Express Company for $350,000. It is charged that in his official capacity he caused this $350,000 to be paid to himself and others out of the Adams Express Company's funds, thereby appropriating $276,905 "to his own use and that of others in fraud of the rights of the Adams Express Company and in violation of his duties as an officer thereof and trustee thereof." This sum. Mr. Lovejoy says, has been whelly lost to the Adams Express Company the three companies mentioned. This interest, Mr. Lovejoy says, Mr. Hoey sold on or about the date named to the Adams Express Company for $500,000, paying that sum to himself and others, thereby appropriating $420,000 of the $500,000 to his own use and that of others.

Mr. Hoey, it is alleged, owes the Adams Express Company $480,005 for these reasons.
Mr. Lovejoy further alleges that Mr. Hoey, in his capacity as an officer of the company, appropriated to his own use $10,045.57 turned his capacity as an officer of the company, appropriated to his own use $10,045.57 turned over to him by the administrator of the estate of Isalah C. Babcock, the former Treasurer of the Adams Express Company. When Mr. Babcock died, in 1835, he was indebted to the company for about $16,000. His administratix paid this over to Mr. Hoey, and the company never got it. Mr. Lovojoy alleges that Mr. Hoey appropriated the money. He savs that by reason of these facts a cause of action exists against Mr. Hoey, and that the plaintiff, Mr. Sanford, is entitled to recover $712,050.57, with interest 7276,905, with interest from March 25, 1882; $420,000 from March 12, 1888, and $18,045.57 from Feb. 1, 1883.

Mr. Lovejoy was at the office of the Adams Express Company yesterday afternoon, but he sent word to all inquirers that he had nothing to say in regard to the action against Mr. Hoey, Clarence A. Seward also refused to talk about the case. Hoot & Clark, Mr. Hoey's lawyers, declined to be interviewed, too.

A man connected with the case against Mr. Hoey said that a similar section is to be brought against Clapp Spooner, whom Mr. Lovejoy succeeded as Ylee-President. This gentleman also said that Mr. Hoey's property in New Jorsey is to be attached in a day or so. He would not tell what real estate Mr. Hoey, "We do not mean to persecute Mr. Hoey,"

"We do not mean to persecute Mr. Hoey," said this gentleman. "We wish to protect the said this gentleman. "We wish to protect the interests of the stockholders, and shall go no further than will be necessary to do that. We intend to take legal steps to remove Mr. Hoey from the office of manager, which he refuses to resign, and from which he can be ousted otherwise only by a two-third vote of the stockholders of the company. There are thousands of stockholders, and to obtain the necessary vote would be almost a physical impossibility."

bility. The attachment against Mr. Hoey was turned over to be party Shoriff Joel O. Stevens. The Deputy Sheriff was not able to serve the summons on Mr. Hoey personally.

The writ was served on the Southern Express Company, the Parniers Loan and Trust Company, and on the Adams Express Company. Officers of the first and second named compenies said they did not know that Mr. Hoey had any of their stock, and it is understood that he holds no Adams Express Company stock.

Saving $105,000 on the Seventy-Arst's

The Armory Board considered yesterday the plans of the armory of the Seventy-first Regiment to be erected at Park avenue and Thirty Tuesday all proved to be far above the limit of $350,000, and the three architects whose plans $350,000, and the three architects whose plans had been originally selected—John R. Thomas, James R. Ware, and Thorn & Wilson—were asked to appear before the Board again. Only Mr. Thomas appeared, the others refusing to be present unless a new public competition was held. Mr. Thomas submitted modifications of his plans which reduced the cost by $105,000. The modifications will not alter the general appearance of the exterior of the building, nor, it is believed, seriously affect the interior, although the proposed pistol range will have to be sacrificed. Mr. Thomas was directed to prepare new plans with his modifications specified in them.

Note Broker Hotchkiss Arrested

Philo P. Hotchkiss, a note broker, was ar rested yesterday in an action brought by J. Haistead Dunn to recover on two promissory notes, together amounting to $610. The arrest was made on an order of Justice O'Brien of the Supreme Court. Dunn says he gave the notes to the defendant for discount, but has not received the cash or the notes. THE MURDER OF MRS. GREGORY.

ards Offered for the Capture of the Mur-derer-Another Man Suspected, MIDDLETOWN, Oct. 16.-Early this morning Noah Gregory, husband of the woman who was murdered in the Gregory farmhouse, near here, on Wednesday afternoon, came to town to advertise his offer of a reward of $300 for the capture of the murderer. The Supervisors have offered a reward of $500, and the notice of this reward appears with the notice of the reward offered by Mr. Gregory. It is expected that the town will offer a reward of $200, to make the total sum $1,000. Notices of the reward will be scattered throughout the county and sent to detectives and police all over the

To-day the Gregory farmhouse has been the object of the morbid curiosity of hundreds of people. They have come for miles just to get a look at the scene of the murder. Some of them were content with driving slowly past the place, but most of them stopped. As is usual in such cases, the majority of the sight-seers were women, most of them young women. Many of them came without mal escort, and they examined all the horrible evidences of the crime and talked of its sickoning details with as much animation and vivacity as if they were discussing a sewing circle or a ball. discussing a sewing circle or a ball. Many persons walked miles this afternoon to see the house. At no time was there not a crowd standing out in front of the gate exchanging views and theories. They liked most to stand by the hitching post. The top of this post was found to be covered with blood when it was examined late on Wednesday evening. It looked as though the murderer had found blood on his hands after leaving the house, and not wishing to have it stain the harness of his horses he had wheel his wet hands on the post and rubbed off the blood. Detective Elwell cut off the blood-stained top of the post and brought it into town.

clue or theory that has been so far advanced has been shapped up and discussed with the greatest eagerness. Capt. Gould has been hard at work all day and has had his officers out in all directions running down possible clues. Detective Elwell has also been far from idle. Suspicion now points to a man named Patterson. About five years ago Mr. Gregory's barn was set on fire. The horse that was in the barn at the time was saved. When the fire was over, and he came to look at the horse closely, Mr. Gregory saw that it was not his animal. He found that it belouged to a man in this city, whose son Robert had driven out to Gregory's and exchanged for Gregory's horse. The boy then set fire to the barn, hoping to conceal his crime. He was arrested, convicted, and sent to the Elmira Reformatory. It is romembered that, at the time of his conviction, he made threats against the lives of the Gregory family. A telegram from the reformatory today, in answer to a message sent by Detective Elwell, said that Fatterson was discharged two yearsago, and that he was at work in Newburgh when last heard of by the reformatory officials. Detective Elwell has gone to Newburgh when last heard of by the reformatory officials. Detective Elwell has gone to Newburgh to follow out this clue.

There is a disposition manifested this afternoon to ignore what seemed at first to be the most important and the only real clue to the identity of the murderer—the beard hairs found in the dead woman's hands. It is said now that they are not beard hair, but that they were nulled out of her own head by the woman in her efforts to protect her head from the blows of her assailant. Mrs. Gregory had long iron-gray hair. The hairs in her hands are most of them white: the others are brown. They were pulled out by the roots, and, with two or three exceptions, are not over three inches in length. Most of them are not two inches long. More than that, they are flat hairs, and could not have grown on a woman's head. The belief is firm in the minds of many that the hu

SHORT TERM LODGES.

New Jersey's State Insurance Commissione

Progressive Benefit orders, commonly known "short term lodges," have been flourishing in New Jersey in opposition to the State Insurance laws. For some time evidence against them has been gathered by George S. Duryea, State Commissioner of Banking and Insurance Yesterday the first arrest was made. The prisoner was Charles J. Brown of 720 Broad street, Newark, who was doing business for the Progressive Benefit Order of Massachusetts. Nine allogations were made against him. a penalty of $500 is claimed on each charge under the provisions of the State law regulating insurance. The money is sued for in the interest of the State and of the the interest of the State and of the Fireman's Bolled Association of Newark. The nine charges against Brown are based upon transactions with Peter Barrenger, a Newark mechanic, who became a member of a local lodge, and, becoming suspicious of the methods reported the transactions to Commissioner Duryes, who was just waiting for such a chance.

Lawyer Elwood S. Leary made investigations which resulted in Brown's arrest. Brown was bailed until Oct 26, when his case will come up in the Circuit Court. Judge Depue fixed the !ail at $1.000.

It is said there are fifteen lodges now in Newark and seventy in the State. Brown is said to hold fifteen certificates in the order, and each is supposed to mature for $100 in a short time.

said to hold fifteen certificates in the order, and each is supposed to mature for $100 in a short time.

In addition to the Progressive Benefit lodges in Newark there are several "commercial enterprises" and "ciothing associations" modelled on the Philadelphia plan to give orders for $35 worth of merchandise in fifteen or sixteen weeks for an assessment of $1 a week. These concerns are flourishing, and the claim is made that lapses and discounts from dealers enable them to give $35 for $15 or $10. The law has not been invoked in their cases, and there is some doubt whether they can be convicted of any illegal act. Clever mathematicians cannot figure that their schemes can end in anything but disaster, and it is said that they are paying off their certificates with the money they get from new contributors.

Preparations for a suit to show up the methods of one of these concerns were made yesterday by Franklin B. Conners, a newspaper man who holds a matured certificate. He gave Lawyer Frank W. Knowles a power of attorney to collect it, and the lawyer met with a refusal. He was told that Conners could get his check in the regular way, which means by submitting to a shave of ten per cent. through some business house in a real or pretended purchase of goods. Conners asked Mr. Knowles to begin suit.

NEW BOOKS. Brief Reviews of Important and Interesting

Mr. Howella's little farce. "The Albany De pot" (Harper & Brothers), is not as amusing as his earlier productions in the same line. One cannot even recall those other pieces without laughing. They were perfect and irresistible. The opening of "The Albany Depot" is rich in promise, but the promise is not fulfilled. Mrs. Roberts is the single character in it who stirs the reader from his equilibrium. Her opening address to the Chorecomen and the Chorecomen's responsive "Mem?" are very funny, and so is Mrs. Roberts's five-page address to her husband, as well as the plot which is developed in it; but Mr. McIlheny, the Irishman, provokes never a smile. Mr. Howells has not got the hang of Mr. McIllieny, and even Willis, who has proved himself so capable on previous occasions, is altogether out of gear on this. From the Harpers we have also ' wickshire Avon," by A. T. Quiller-Couch, an interesting book, beautifully prepared, with charming illustrations by Alfred Parsons; Theodore Child's instructive account of "The Spanish-American Republics," copiously illustrated by Thulstrup, Remington, and others; "Literary Landmarks of Edinburgh," by Lau-rence Hutton, also illustrated; "Hints to Amateurs," a very clear and well-arranged handbook on art, by Louise Jopling, and two novels in the "Franklin Square Library." namely, "Dumaresq's Daughter," by Grant Allen, and "Miss Maxwell's Affections," by Richard Pryce.

"Two Worlds" and other poems, by Richard Watson Gilder, are published by the Century Company. The little volume contains about fifty poems, only a few of which have been in print before. There is grace and strength in these verses. The lines on Sherman and Sheridan are marked by the fervor of high feeling, and are notable among the collection The sonnet on Napoleon is especially ingenious and able. From the Century Company we have also "The Squirrel Inn." one of Frank E Stockton's stories: "The Women of the French Salons," an account of the distinguished women of France during the last three centuries, by Amelia Gere Mason, a notably hand some book, with abundant portraits; Land of the Lamas," an account of trave through China, Mongolia, and Tibet, by William Woodville Rockhill, and two books for children, namely, "Marjorle and Her Papa," by Robert Howe Fletcher, illustrated by R. B. Birch from designs by the author, and "Baby World," a new edition of stories, rhymes, and pictures compiled from St. Nicholas by Mary

Mapes Dodge.

Here are the Duke of Wellington, Mrs. Arbuthnot, Prince Talleyrand, and Count D'Orsay out walking in 1834; here also the eccentric dandy, Lord Petersham, and a generous variety of other dandles of former lays, together with a number of distinguished ladies of the ballet and other ladies, all done in colors, some of them looking and behaving undoubtedly as they did in real life, and all illus-trating in highly interesting fashion "The Reminiscences and Recollections of Captain Gronow," afforded in a new and handome edition, in two volumes, by Charles Scribner's Sons. For fifty years it was the fortune of Capt. Gronow to be thrown into contact with the notabilities of London and Paris; he had the habit of noting what was peculiar, and his anecdotes of camp, court, clubs, and society in the early part of the cenury make notably attractive reading. The illustrations, thirty-two in number, are the work of Joseph Grego. They bear directly upon the text, and are adapted and in a thentic pictures of the time with which the ext is concerned. They are full of delight. We may learn from them how Beau conversation with the Duchess of Rutland at a ball at Almack's, and contrast with his easy bearing the firm but somewhat electrified pose of Sir George Warrender on the same oceasion. We may glance into the greenroom of the King's Theatre and behold the Earl of Fife, the Prince Esterhazy, and others watching Mile. Mercandotti polsed upon one toe and otherwise edifying themselves after the manner that greenrooms make possible. We see how the gentry gambled, how the soldiers strutted, and how the British tourist looked n Paris in those days; and Lord Cranley. the father of four-in-hands," is made to roll by us in a cloud of dust. Cunningham. D. D., Vicar of St. Mary's, Cambridge, and "The Fine Arts." by Prof. G. Baldwin Brown of the University of Edinburgh. And we have besides from the Scribners "Across Augustus Stoddard: "The High-Top Sweeting' and other poems, all very natural and charming, by Elizabeth Akers, and "Elsket" and other stories, by Thomas Nelson Page.

It seems to be a rather curious thing for a woman to be telling sea stories, but some sea stories doubtless are of a sort to make us think that this class of fiction would be none the worse for the touch of woman's refining hand. Miss Molly Elliot Seawell, if we may be permitted to employ the language that the oc casion suggests, spins a good yarn. Her "Little Jarvis" was an interesting and successful book, and "Midshipman Paulding," newly published by the Appletons, is also in teresting, and should be likewise successful. It is a story of the battle of Lake Champlain, the young hero being one of the twenty chil-dren of John Paulding of Westchester county. one of the captors of Major André. The young readers to whom the new tale is addressed will find it more satisfactory in one respect than Miss Seawell's earlier story. Poor little Jarvis died at his post of duty in his first fight, but Midshipman Paulding, though equally brave and faithful, survives the battle of Lake Cham plain. Young readers like to have the here survive. Two other stories newly afforded by the Appletons are "The Faith Doctor." by Edward Eggleston, and "We All," by Octave

AMUSEMENTS.

"The Better Part."

As the weather cooled, and the inside of theatre became a comfortable place, "Jane seemed a little too short for a full evening entertainment. Last night the fun of that rollicking farce was fpreceded by half an hour of sentimentality. A new short play. "The Better Part," by Edward S. Belknap and Mason Carnes, was acted. Two men may seem one too many for the job of writing a dramatic sketch with no more words in it than a column and a half of THE Sun. Nor will the casual observer think that 'The Better Part" contains plot or other substance sufficient to demand collaboration. But good half-hour pieces are famously hard to make, and this one is meritorious enough to the use of two tens in its preparatio It serves well the purposes of preface and contrast to the brisk and jolly "Jane." There are three characters only. Two of them, an actor and an author, are out of money and almost out of hope. Then the news comes that the actor has been engaged to play a part which, he believes, will make fame and for time. The spirits of the two chums rise from the depths of despondency to the heights of elation. At that juncture a pale and careworn young woman enters. The actor once wooed her, but she did not love him, and now she is the wife of another player. Her husband has been out of employment so long that he, she, and their child are at starvation's door. The husband can get the engagement which her rejected lover has secured if only the latter will decline it. Will he do it? Not for the man who has outrivalled him in love does she ask it, nor for the woman who preferred the other to him, but for the sake of the child. There is a bitter struggle in his breast, but he makes the sacrifice, which is thereupon declared by his comrade to be "the better The little piece is written with directness." It serves well the purposes of preface and con

The little piece is written with directness, considerable force, and much charm of simplicity. The principal rôle is taken with excellent effect by Paul Arthur, and the two other characters are played by Elaine Ellison and Herbert Fortier.

Growth of Building Associations in Jersey In four years the building and loan associations of New Jersey have increased from 100 to 254, with more than $22,000,000 invested for the benefit of their 71.726 shareholders and nearly all in real estate loans to the bor rowing members. So says James Bishop of the Bureau of Statistics of Labor and Industries in his report just issued. In 1880 the net capital was $10,000,000. It is estimated that capital was $10,000,000. It is estimated that there are now in existence 6,000 of these associations in the United States with a million and a half of members and an accumulated capital of about $500,000,000, with $180,000,000 annual receipts.

The oldest organization in New Jersey is the Mercer Mutual Loan Association of Treaton, started in February, 1894. The South Ward, No. 2, of Camden dates from 1852, the Franklin of Salem from 1891, and the Building and Loan Association of Mount Holly, and the Mechanics of Treaton from 1892. With these five exceptions all have had their beginning since the close of the war, and more than three-fourths since 1870.

It is a copy of the Pandects of Justin ian printed at Florence in 1553, preserved in the original binding. It contains the doctor's marginal notes in Greek and Latin. On the title page is written: "In Templo Intimo Lond: 1V. Calenda Mai MDCCCXCL Scribe Lond: IV. Calendæ Mai MDCCCXCI. Scribe-bam Fridericus Tomkins. Armiger Artium Magister: Doctor utriusque Juris." It is said that only two copies of this edition are known to exist, and that this is the only copy in America. Dr. Tomkins says he has searched for this volume for twenty-five years, and has visited booksellers from the Adriatic to the Pacific in his search. In presenting the volume to Mr. Coudert, Dr. Tomkins said that it was in token of admiration for his excellent qualities as a jurist and a friend, and Mr. Coudert, although taken by surprise, expressed his thanks for the gift.
